100 Attend Made-In-Alberta Meeting

Sponsored by the Alberta Business Committee, a very enthusastic meeting was held in the Capitol Theatre last Thursday afternoon, which was addressed by Howard Stutchbury, Alberta Trade Commissioner, and A. C. McKay, Secretary of theRetail Merchants Association and attended by 100 ladies of the town and district, with Mrs I. B. Roberts in the chair, and quite a number of gentlemen present.

The theme of the meeting was "Buy Alberta Products," and bring prosperity back to us. The speakers pointed out from figures, and from observation, the decided advantage it would be to us to patronize the manufacturing concerns of our own province, and by so doing, put our men back to work, and keep the Factories busy.

One woman stated that she was really surprised to know that so many articles of food, clothing, etc., were manufacturde in Alberta, and that as far as she was concerned, she was going to buy Alberta.

Quite a number of prizes, donated by manufacturers for these meetings, were distributed, and each lady received a bar of soap as she left the meeting. It is understood that another meeting will be held later on when the rush is over, so that more of the people, especially those who do the buying, can be informed of the Alberta products that may be purchased for use in the homes of Alberta. Everyone appreciated and enjoyed the meeting.

The World's Series in Baseball will commence on October 3rd, and it looks as though the New York Giants of the National League, and the Washington Senators of the American League would battle it out.

A number of Raymond people were in Stirling Wednesday afternoon attending the fueral services of Mrs. A. E. Sugar Campaign Now Under Way

The beet harvest is on, and beets are rolling into the Factory in an almost endless stream. Miff Allred was the first man over the scales with a load of 1933 beets at the Factory, and despite the rain on Monday, the scales have been kept pretty busy ever since. The beets are nice looking, testing about 16.5 sugar content, and this will increase as the season advances. Tonnage limits have been set but everyone is hauling his quota, and the harvest is going steadily ahead.

The Factory started at 8 a.m. Thursday, and is away on what will likely be the biggest run of its history, unless something unforseen arises. Acreage has been reduced, but the average tonnage is continually increasing, and the total tonnage remain about at the maximum 150,000 tons. This added tonnage is a real benefit to the beet grower, as here is where the profit in the industry lies. It costs about as much to produce and harvest an eight ton crop as it does a fifteen to one, and the added tonnage means added dollars to the grower.

A full crew is lined up and ready to take their shifts, and the campaign is getting under way, under almost ideal conditions.

Grain harvest is rapidly being cleaned up now, and with good weather for the balance of this week, it will be left to do in this respect. Binders have been around 10 to 12 days, and nearly all of the grain has graded No. 1, and a great amount of it No. 1 hard.

Mutual Opening In Second Ward

The Mutual Opening of the Second Ward was held Tuesday night in the Chapel, and a splendid time was enjoyed by all present. Due to the busy season, many were unable to attend, especially of those out of town, but the crowd present greatly enjoyed the evening.

A bright and entertaining program occupied the first part of the evening, and following this, dancing was enjoyed for the remainder of the evening. The ward Mutual officers had charge of the evening.

Bob Salmon Has Car Tip Over

Bob Salmon had the misfortune to have his car tip over last Sunday on the Macleod road, north of Cardston at what is known as "Dead Man's Corner."

He and his girl friend were out riding in the afternoon, and when they attempted this turn something apparently went wrong with the steering gear, and instead of making the curve, they went into the ditch and turned over, wrecking the left front wheel, the radiator, and bending the top of the car and the fender, and breaking considerable glass. The car was left in Cardston for repairs.

The occupants of the car escaped pretty fortunately, although the lady had her back injured some, and Bob received a couple of nasty cuts on his face from the broken glass.

Ray Lee Victim Of Serious Accident

Ray, the eighteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Lee, met with a serious and what could easily have been a fatal accident at the H. S. Allen farm on Wednesday afternoon, when he had his right ankle broken, both bones being snapped off, and one of them split quite a distance up from the break.

He was going out to do some stooking after dinner, and mounted the saddle animal that was kept in for odd jobs, and in some way the horse fell, breaking his leg when she hit the ground. The horse was up immediately, and with the broken leg, Ray could not shake his foot out of the stirrup, and the animal started bucking and running around the yard, with the boy dragging at her feet. In the chase she hit his shoulder against a 4x4 timber, throwing out the shoulder, and bruising his face badly.

He was rushed to the Hospital where he will have to stay for two months at least, and while serious everyone is thankful that he was not killed. The horse was tame and gentle, but became frightened when the young man was dragging at her heels.

TURKEYS ON THE TROT

From Christian Science Monitor

American Indians are much in the spotlight these days. Taciturn the red man may be, but he is matching his economy of words with economy of taxpayers' money.

Only the other day the Menominees showed their sturdy self-reliance by refusing a grant of $30,00 from the federl emergency relief funds, respectfully but firmly informing the Administration that up in their Wisconsin reservation the tribe was able to build its own roads.

Now comes a despatch out of Washington relating an exploit by Navajo Indians employed in a civilian camp at Shiprock, N. M., which smacks of positive genius strongly savored with humor. Grasshoppers there had become more than a passing nuisance Alfalfa fields disappeared overnight, melons and peaches were vanishing.

An appeal to Washington brought $1400 to help oust the intruding grasshoppers. And what did the resourceful Navajos do with the money? They bought turkeys—1100 young ones. These they herded in localities where the grasshoppers most abounded. When the turkeys had gobbled them up in one spot the thrifty Navajos led the birds to other desolated spots.

Result: the grasshoppers were no more and the turkeys waxed exceeding plump. Melon fields and alfalfa meadows have been consideably saved. And the boys in the C.C.C. camps thereabouts are already thinking of Thanksgiving Day, when the long tables will groan beneath the weight of many turkeys accompanied with all the trimmings. Incidentily, enough will be left to start another flock for 1934.

Again the red man points the way. Loud has been the criticism—often justified—of many demands for funds to be expended on projects which obviously could yield nothing in return. The Navajos of New Mexico achieved the purpose for which the emergency relief was given and by their ingenuity turned the taxpayers' money into a useful paying investment.

BUSINESS RECOVERY MAKES GOOD HEADWAY

By the Associated Press
New York, Aug. 27

Business interests apparently are showing an "excellent" response to the NRA program, and "in spite of the complexities and irregularities of the situation, the impression is given that we are moving ahead and that real progress toward recovery is being made," says the current review of the Guaranty Trust Company.

"Whether under the stimulus of the recovery program or through the operation of normal recuperative forces," asserts the review, "the upward trend in business activity has continued, although a slight tapering off in some directions has been noted in the last few weeks."

Promises are apparently never too extravagent to attract public attention. We recall the promises of wealth to be acquired over-night that have never failed to draw money into some wild scheme. Today, the public are apt to be beguiled by the promoters of various diets which promise an end to all toubles and a cure for all ills.

These faddy diets are usually presented in an attractive manner. Scientific facts are ignored or misrepresented. We are told, for example, that we should not mix carbohydrates (cereals and starches) with proteins (meats fish and eggs.) The promoters of this statement base their remarks upon the fact that the proteins are acted upon by the acid digestive fluids of the stomach, while the carbohydrates are digested by the alkaline juices of the mouth and the intestine.

There is no foundation for idea that the presence of carbohydrates and proteins together in the mouth, stomach or intestine will interfere with the digestion of one or the other. Indeed, it is the acid nature of the food leaving the stomach which stimulates the flow of the alkaline digestive juices of the intestine.

Futhermore, the foods we eat are a mixture. Milk, whicr we rightly regard as the best single food we possess, contains about equal amounts of protein and carbohydrate. If it were true that these two substances should notbe taken into the stomach at the same time, we should have to discontinue the breast-feeding of children and the use of milk.

There is no apparent reason why we should not eat, at the same meal, toast (carbohydrate) and eggs or meat (proteins) and potatoes (carbohydrate). Our digestive system is quite capable of handling such combinations of foods without difficulty.

Health demands a well-balanced diet, and the way to secure such a diet is by eating a wide variety of foods. Safety is assured by including milk, leafy vegetables and fruits in the diet each day. Diets which are faddy are unsound. Diets which promise everything will likely do harm rather than good.

Health is a valuable possession. The body should be cared for along the lines of scientific knowledge and not according to the unsuppported statements of promoters of faddy diets.

The Road To Recovery

The adjournment of the London Conference held out to each of sixty-six nations the challenge to put its own house in order. How is this to be done? Are we to demolish and consign to the scrap-heap those serviceable appointments to which we are accustomed even though in some instances they may have become tumbledown and unattractive, or are we to chose a process of refinishng and rearrangement

Russia established a new order by force. The United States is endeavoring to bring about a new deal through Governmental paternalism. The C. C. F. would have Canada attain a new Commonwealth by socialistic legislation. Other groups advocate other shibbileths.

Are there mens, however, by which readjustment can be brought about so that, that which is good in our present regime, can be retained, and that which is detrimental can be mproved to effect our desired economic rehabilitation? Are the tools of recovery locked away or are they within our grasp?

With the wings of NIRA's blue eagle fluttering at our threshold, it is only natural that consideraation is being increasingly given to the Amercan policy. What may be conosidered sound in our neighbour's household, however is not necessarily applicable or desirable in Canada. As we conceive it NIRA requires a vast international market for produce. Canada lacks this market but is the fifth international trader. Further, NIRA requires an appropriation of vast sums of money, and we believe Canada, with taxtion as it is, can ill afford to increase her borrowings for this purpose. No do we put emphasis on the policies of artifical price raising, and more Government in business.

Of one thing we are certain. Canada will not usher in a new order by force, nor will she stage a revolutioon. Recovery, moreover, can be faciliated with out coining a new slogan or turning unside down the capitalistic system in which we live We believe that recovery will be achieved through the toning up of our present system. In fact, this remedial process is now in operation. Everyone has not been passive. Our leaders are awake. Not all of our states men are dormant. Even if not "all's right with the world" at least some tried things are.

Our course to recovery involves a continuous searching out of our weaknees. Directioon is always needed in such an enquiry. Greater inspiration and leadership can be given at this time jointly and individually by both Governments and business looking toward a normal policy of recovery. First of all there should be a general recognition of the need for less self-imposed ordinances on the part of Governments and more business-prompted legislatioon. Helpful criticism should come before, not after, the law begins to be adminstered. Patronage, too, must give way.Poolitical expediency, however desirable for the party may often be unfortunate for the nation. Hand-outs do not invite necessarily the generaal welfare.

Moreover our governing bodies are too numerous, their expenses often too uneconomic while already been instituted as a relent. What about it? It seems reasonable to expect that Governments should be willing to proceed further with those adjustment measures which have already been instituted measures which have already been nstituted in this field as a result of the insistence of business leadership in its desire for recovery and stability. There must be no flagging in that insistence at this time.

Business for its part has a national duty in adhering strictly and at all times to equitable trading practices. Not that integrity fails to characterize our business dealings, but that wherever the principles of the unfair dealer show themselves, whether he be a larger manipulator or of the smaller fry, they must be killed and not scotched. A fractional percentage of our business must not brand or penalize the whole.

The improvement of living conditions for labour and employment for all who are willing to work, can continue to be our objective under the present regime. Even if all that is desirable has not been accomplished for labour, it is to be admitted that we in Canada have gone a along way from sweatshops child labour and exploitation of manual workers. Neither industry today, nor government is deaf to valid economic need .Assisting in our normal recovery will be a continuing joint leadership of laboour, business and Government for our social betterment.

Cannot a suitable program be drafted and implemented for agriculture? We have adequate machinery in our present institutions so to do, and we are not incompetent in this field of leadership. What we require is to follow proven forms and basic principles tried and tempered in the crucible of experience. What does business and government policy? If we listen to the logic of national reason, and shut our ears to class clamourigs on this score, would immigration improve or would it not improve a situation where in productivity seems to have out-run consumptioon. Government could well review this poossibility. We expect the Macmillan Commissioon will give a lead to our financial policy. Its findings should be considered in the light of our national welfare and not in the darkness of political prejudices. If Canada has an honest-to-goodness need for a Central Bank, let us have it. If our banking system is sound, let us say so.

Cannot Canadian business accept the responibility of taking such voluntary action as is necessary to put its house order We believe the answer is "yes", and that business c be counted upon to give leadership in some directions and government in others. A concerted effort now on the part of both is to be recommended. The road to recovery lies within the present system, not without.—Canadian Business.

INDISPENSIBLE TO BUSINESS

"Adversisng pays!"

That epigrammatic declaration is questioned by no one informed in the history of business and commercial development. It is a statement of fact, obvious and indisputable.

Quality and servicq have built vast commercial and industrial institutions, but with their handmaid, advertsing, greater institutions have been built in far less time and at far less cost. Advertising brings buyers and quality; service and advantageous price keeps them.

It is significant that the makers of those products whose copyrighted names are synonymous with the product itself have all been large-scale advertisers. Making a better mousetrap wasn't enough.

What these famous national advertisers haveaccomplished for the trade names of their products has been done by merchants for their business names. Advertising has made one store synonymous with clothing, another with furniture, another with meats aand groceries, and another with music.

In every business and community there is some far-seeing and enterpsising manufacturer or merchant who raises his product and business name above the common level by making advertising work for him.

NEW VEGETABLES OF PROMISE

(Experimental Farms Note.)

There has been a great deal of effort made during the past few years on the Dominion Experimental Farms to actually originate and introduce new varieties of vegetables that really have merits surpassing the ones in use for many years.

Corn is a comparatively easy crop to work with and it is simply surprising the improvement made by plant breeding methods. For instance Banting, Gold Nugget, Dorinny and Spanish Gold have taken the place of many of the older white varieties, due largely to earliness, superior quality and yellow colour.

Beans are still an important snap pod crop and it is most interesting to note that the well known Davis Wax bean that was looked upon as one of the best money making varietes has been superseded by an improved stringless strain.

If a very tasty green fleshed muskmelon is desired the Early Knight variety will be found most acceptable. This variety matures very early and grows to a very desirable size for the ice cream trade. The flesh is very attractive green, rich in muskness and with an exception ally fine flavour. As an early maturing green fleshed variety it is unsurpassed.

The value of early maturing tomatoes in certain sections is well known to those who have experienced a desire to grow the crop in their own garden and have the thrill of pickng nice ripe fruit fresh from the plants. This is possible even in the short season sections if such varieties as Abel and Alacrity are grown. Tomatoes fully ripened can be had in from 95 to 109 days from seed sowing, according to the performance of these plants at the Central Experimental Farm, where these varieties for earliness and yield in 1932.

Where a rhubarb pie is relished or sauce of that plant is looked upon with favor, Ruby rhubarb will be found to give the reddest product and require the least amount of sugar of all varieties available.

After all, those interested in vegetable gardening should consult the Superintendent of the nearest Dominion Experimental Station regarding the problem of varieties suitable for the locality.

A SECRET OF HAPPINESS

"If you don't care for the things you can't obtain you will be fairly happy.

On the surface it is not an inspiring message. Not to care for the things we can't obtain is to resign, give up, be supine. And when we quit in life's struggle we pay a dear price, indeed, for our meagre mete of happiness. Most of us perhaps, would rather keep on fighting. There is joy in the fight; joy at least to know there is fight in us.

Let us reverse the formula.

"If you care enough for the things you have obtained, you will be supremely happy.

The humble farmer, on his little farm—if he loves that farm—may be happy beyond compare. If he loves it well, he will till it well, intelligently, thoroughly, and it will yield him rich store. The widowed mother, in the little cottage, has her children, and if she loves them well they will be her life. The clerk at the desk, if he loves his work, will be happy in it. Or the motorman in his cab of steel, may find in the easy response of the throbbing motors and his rolling palace, a sense of responsibility for the passing multitude that will bring him pride and joy.

To be truly happy in our lot we need not be contented. Indeed, happiness and contentment, while we keep moving on life's highway, are not to be reconciled. If we love the work we do we shall be thrilled not alone to do it well, but to do it better.

Far away fields are always green to too many of us. Only after many fruitless pilgrimages is the simple truth borne home that if the field at our door is not attractive and verdant it is because we do not water its shrubs and grasses. If we love our fields we will tend it. And, more important, if we tend it we will come to love it.

And this to them in whom ambition burns. Only by the degree to which you prove yourself true to the modest task of today can you fit yourself for, or inspire others to entrust you with, greater duties tomorrow.
